Democratizing Communist Militaries:

Democratizing Communist Militaries Marybeth Peterson Ulrich, 1999 Discusses how we can help make formerly communist armies supporters of democracy Democratization and the Post-communist Militaries: United States Support for Democratization in the Czech and Russian Militaries Marybeth Peterson Ulrich, 1996 This study focuses on the role of military institutions in the democratic transitions of post communist states The main thesis is that political systems matter and are indeed determinants of patterns of civil military relations Authoritarian and democratic political systems produce different forms of civilian control and military professionalism Consequently shifts in political systems necessarily result in changed patterns of civilian control and military professionalism I argue that concentrating on two critical dimensions of the military democratization problem democratic political control and democratic military professionalism will address the democratization needs which transitioning militaries face I explore these concepts in depth and identify specific issue areas on which both internal and external policymakers can focus to further the democratization of post communist militaries Building these patterns of democratic political control and democratic military professionalism should be the aim of all involved in the military democratization process in post communist states Ignoring the process of democratization of military institutions risks the overall process of democratic consolidation within the transitioning state and the protection of the society's democratic gains The case study method is used to explore the specific problems of military democratization and democratization assistance in Russia and the Czech Republic The dimensions of the military democratization problem are applied to these post communist military institutions with the goal of assessing progress made and democratization needs that remain as the transitions progress An examination of the US military's democratization programs in place in the former Soviet bloc however clearly shows that no such understanding of the scope of the military democratization problem exists among US policymakers Consequently the contributions that these programs have made toward building patterns of democratic political control and democratic military professionalism has been negligible Policy recommendations include focusing military to military contacts between consolidated democracies and transitioning states on specific dimensions of the military democratization problem developed in the theoretical chapters The models developed and conclusions drawn in this endeavor offer some solutions to both theorists and policymakers studying the problem of military democratization in the transitioning states and consequently may make some contribution toward their democratic consolidation

Democratization and the Post-communist Militaries Marybeth Peterson Ulrich, 1996 Military Rule and Democratization International Political Science Association. World Congress, 2003 The Present Volume Is The Outcome Of Well Researched Presentations Made By Various Scholars On The Role Of Military In Democratisation At The Ipsa World Congress Held At Quebec City In Canada During August 2000 The Future of the Army Profession Lloyd J. Matthews, 2002 This book contains essays on various aspects of the Army profession its leadership ethics and knowledge

Historical political and social perspectives are presented as well as case studies that focus on training and development of personnel Article titles include Trust in the Military Profession The Role of Strategic Leaders for the Future Army Profession and Professional Leadership and Diversity in the Army Civil-Military Relations in Post-Communist Countries Todor S. Hitrov,2004-03-01 Since 1989 the countries of Central and Eastern Europe have undergone an unprecedented transition from communism to democracy Establishment of democratic control of armed forces is an inseparable part of the process of consolidation of democracy The purpose of this thesis is to define those factors that influence democratization of civil military relations in post communist countries in the process of transition to democracy My argument is that countries develop democratic control of armed forces in different ways and with different time boundaries until the end state is achieved The democratization of civil military relations depends on capability of the country in transition to effectively establish by which I mean to build and put into effect institutions for democratic control of the military In evaluating development of the democratization of civil military relations the post communist countries of Hungary and Bulgaria are studied in detail with particular attention to the process of establishment development and interrelation of institutional arrangements In this aspect historical legacy international context and path of transition can help or obstruct the process of development of institutions for democratic control of armed forces Globalization of Civil-military Relations IPSA Research Committee on Armed Forces and Society. Triannual Conference,George Cristian Maior,2002 Slavic Review ,2001 American quarterly of Soviet and East European studies varies Democratization and the Philippine Military Rosalie B. Arcala,2002

Dedovshchina in the Post-soviet Military Françoise Daucé,Elisabeth Sieca-Kozlowski,2006 In contemporary armies violence among soldiers seems to be a universal phenomenon found in both professional and drafted armies However the comparison of violent practices in various armies around the world allows us to identify specific features linked to those countries sociological political or anthropological contexts Hazing for example seems to be more violent in the armies of transitional societies Russia Eastern Europe Latin America where social tensions encountered by citizens in their daily lives are carried over to and sometimes intensified in the military The comparison of Russian dedovshchina with the situation in other countries makes it possible to identify universal transitional and national characteristics of military violence Contents Konstantin Bannikov on the consequences of the spread throughout society of archaic violence produced by the Russian army Anna Colin Lebedev on the perception of military violence in Russian society Anton Oleynik on informal relationships among prisoners and conscripts Kirill Podrabinek on the reasons of the prevalence of dedovshchina in the post Soviet context Igor Obraztsov on the historical roots of dedovshchina Vadim Mikhailin on the role of language in the military milieu Julie Elkner on the Committee of Soldiers Mothers Bakit Katchekeyev on hazing in the Kyrgyz army Irakli Sesiashvili on hazing in the Georgian army Hana Cervinkova on hazing in the Czech army James Wither on bullying in the British army Eduardo Paes Machado Joris Van Bladel on dedovshchina and the all volunteer force Civil-military Relations in Democratizing

 Conclusions African Democratization and Military Coups Chuka Onwumechili,1998-10-30 Onwumechili provides an exciting perspective on African military coups and reminds us that democracy is not synonymous solely with Western societies He examines democracies in traditional Africa and shows how these socieites clearly defined and limited the roles of traditional African armies From this background Onwumechili makes readers appreciate that modern African armies are deviant institutions with no roots in traditional Africa Rather he argues one has to seek those roots in Africa s recent colonial history Dr Onwumechili goes on to describe the reasons for coups and their tactics Finally he examines how military coups can be prevented While previous solutions have largely failed Onwumechili provides convincing solutions based on case studies
