Defining Creole:

Defining Creole John H. McWhorter, 2005-02-03 A conventional wisdom among creolists is that creole is a sociohistorical term only that creole languages share a particular history entailing adults rapidly acquiring a language usually under conditions of subordination but that structurally they are indistinguishable from other languages The articles by John H McWhorter collected in this volume demonstrate that this is in fact untrue Creole languages while complex and nuanced as all human languages are are delineable from older languages as the result of their having come into existence only a few centuries ago Then adults learn a language under untutored conditions they abbreviate its structure focusing upon features vital to communication and shaving away most of the features useless to communication that bedevil those acquiring the language non natively When they utilize their rendition of the language consistently enough to create a brand new one this new creation naturally evinces evidence of its youth specifically a much lower degree of the random accretions typical in older languages which only develop over vast periods of time The articles constitute a case for this thesis based on both broad cross creole ranges of data and focused expositions referring to single creole languages The book presents a general case for a theory of language contact and creolization in which not only transfer from source languages but also structural reduction plays a central role based on facts whose marginality of address in creole studies has arisen from issues sociopolitical as well as scientific For several decades the very definition of the term creole has been elusive even among creole specialists This book attempts to forge a path beyond the inter and intra disciplinary misunderstandings and stalemates that have resulted from this and to demonstrate the place that creoles might occupy in other linguistic subfields including typology language contact and syntactic theory

Defining Creole John H. McWhorter, 2023 Collecting recent work by John H McWhorter on creole languages their origins this volume showcases many of his novel controversial theories including the claim that the differences between creoles their source languages is much more than a matter of inflection

White by Definition Virginia R. Dominguez, 1993-12 A profound study of the nebulous Creoles Dominguez's use of original sources is scholarship at its best Her study is fascinating thought provoking controversial and without a doubt one of the most objective analyses of Creole Louisiana Her emphasis on social stratification and her excellent integration of ethnic and racial classification of Creoles with legal and social dynamics and individual choice of ethnic identity elucidates strikingly the continuing controversy of who and what is a Louisiana Creole Journal of American Ethnic History Dominguez's most important contribution lies in her conceptualization of the problem of identity She treats ethnic identity as something that can change over time warning us against imposing current meanings on the past and requiring us to consider evidence of how terms were actually used in the past It is hard to imagine a frame of reference more ideally suited to historical analysis Louisiana History A valuable interdisciplinary examination of the processes of racial definition in Louisiana's history Her study combines the anthropologist's sensitivity to language and self definition within a community with a skillful exploitation context of Pidgins and Creoles and then go on with concentrating mainly on the development of the phonology during the different stages

2 DEFINITIONS 2.1 Pidgins Defining what is a pidgin and what is not is a challenging undertaking Generally a Pidgin is any combination and distortion of two languages as a means of communication Sebba 1997 1 Pidgin English is defined as any lingua franca consisting of English and another language Sebba 1997 1 It is a reduced language that arises through extensive contact between different groups of people who do not share a common language Holm 1988 4 The Pidgin is strengthened because there is a need for these stated groups to communicate for example for trade but none of these groups learns the mother tongue of the other group Holm 1988 4 Speakers of these groups can be divided into at least two groups Speakers with less power are speakers of the substrate language Mostly they are accommodating by adopting words of speakers with more power speakers of the superstrate language Holm 1988 5 Furthermore the superstrate speakers accept many of the emerging changes in order to facilitate communication and to become more comprehensible simultaneously they do not try to speak as they do within their own group Holm 1988 5
