The Propagation of the Christian Religion, an Additional Evidence to Its Truth. In a Concluding Dialogue Between a Believer and His Convert BELIEVER.,1820 Doing More for Less? New Evidence on Lobbying and Government Contracts Ms.Senay Agca,Ms.Deniz O Igan,Fuhong Li,Ms.Prachi Mishra,2019-08-09 Why do firms lobby This paper exploits the unanticipated sequestration of federal budget accounts in March 2013 that reduced the availability of government funds disbursed through procurement contracts to shed light on this question Following this event firms with little or no prior exposure to the federal accounts that experienced cuts reduced their lobbying spending In contrast firms with a high degree of exposure to the cuts maintained and even increased their lobbying spending This suggests that when the same number of contractors competed for a piece of a reduced pie the more affected firms likely intensified their lobbying efforts to distinguish themselves from the others and improve their chances of procuring a larger share of the smaller overall These findings are stronger in government dependent sectors and when there is intense competition The evidence is more consistent with a rent seeking explanation for lobbying The Appeals Process in the International Criminal Court Sonia Głogowska,2025-11-19 This book presents an analysis of the model of appellate procedure before the International Criminal Court based on both the Court s legal texts and case law While guiding the reader through the complexities of the Rome Statute the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and the Regulations of the Court the author underlines the role of judicial law making powers in international trials The study reflects on numerous legal and functional problems arising in the Appeal Chamber s practice including those that have yet to be addressed by the Court The monograph proves that while the ICC legal texts are not clear about the general shape of appellate procedure before the ICC especially the functions of the Appeals Chamber and objectives of appellate proceedings the model of appellate procedure has been developed through the Appeals Chamber s practice sometimes contrary to the literal interpretation of the provisions of the Rome Statute and not in line with the expectations of the international community The book will be of interest to academics researchers and policy makers working in the areas of International Criminal Justice International Human Rights Law and Criminal Law and Procedure Scanning for New Evidence on the Nutrient Content of Human Milk National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine,Health and Medicine Division,Food and Nutrition Board,Committee on Scanning for New Evidence on the Nutrient Content of Human Milk,2020-10-13 Human milk is considered the biologic norm for feeding the human infant during the first 6 months of life and it is a preferred food from 6 to 12 months It is a complex food and exerts its biologic effects well beyond its known nutritional value however human milk composition and the complexity of its composition is not wholly known or understood Thus defining the composition of milk as well as both the individual and combined effects of milk components and the volume consumed on infant growth and development is central to optimizing infant health Furthermore defining human milk composition volume and the myriad factors that influence milk components is needed for developing future Dietary Reference Intake DRI standards for nutrient intakes during the first 12 months of life

Scanning for New Evidence on the Nutrient Content of Human Milk examines the new and emerging evidence describing the nutrient content of human milk as well as the volume of milk consumed both of which are needed to understand nutrient consumption by healthy breastfed infants An evidence scan approach was used to summarize the status of the published literature on the nutrient content of human milk and to identify new evidence on nutrients in human milk that could inform the need for a systematic review as a component of the DRI process
