Clinical Psychology and People with Intellectual Disabilities Eric Emerson, 1998-11-10 What can psychology contribute to the understanding of intellectual disabilities and how does clinical psychology help in supporting people with these disabilities This is the first book to provide a comprehensive overview of concepts and problems as well as covering the clinical and consulting skills that support interventions in this field Starting from basic issues of epidemiology and cause the authors consider issues raised when mental health problems co occur when sexual abuse is alleged and when a person s behaviour is found to challenge the resources of the people or services providing support The authors examine the family context and how to address it and also the organizational context and how to understand and work within it including its legal aspects Finally they consider health promotion issues and how to work with families and communities to improve the wellbeing of people with intellectual disabilities This is a truly comprehensive text written out of both rich clinical experience and extensive knowledge of research and training It will be invaluable for students and practitioners in many disciplines that are involved in the field of intellectual disability This exceptionally well organized and comprehensive book goes beyond the typical approach to this topic by providing state of the art advice that emphasizes multiple perspectives on assessment and intervention The material is practical and systems orientated and reflects a maturity and wisdom stemming from lengthy experience with this population Highly recommended as a source of useful information and support Professor Edward Carr Suny at Stony Brook New York USA a terrific book Eric Emerson and his colleagues have brought together leading experts to give clear expositions of wide ranging and complex topics This book deserves to be and will undoubtedly become the standard text for trainee and qualified practitioner alike Professor David Felce Welsh Centre for Learning Disabilities University of Wales College of Medicine International Journal of Palliative Nursing ,2001 Forthcoming Books Rose Army,2003-04 Supporting the Physical Health Needs of People with Learning Disabilities Steve Hardy,Ed Chaplin,Peter Woodward,2016-04 It has long been known that people with learning disabilities have poorer health than the general population but the extent of these differences becomes striking when considering the evidence of reduced life expectancy In 2013 the Confidential Inquiry into the Premature Deaths of People with Learning Disabilities reported that men typically die 13 years younger and women 20 years younger than the general population In 42% of cases the death was considered premature The reasons for this lower life expectancy are varied but what we do know is this group are two and a half times more likely to have multiple health needs than other people and often have difficulties accessing health services or receiving appropriate treatment from clinicians As well as looking at the challenges of accessing healthcare and navigating care pathways this handbook presents a practical guide to the most common conditions and health needs with chapters written by experts in those conditions and their relationship to learning disabilities A range of issues are covered including mental health cancer epilepsy respiratory and swallowing problems and poor sight and hearing The book aims to increase awareness and knowledge of how these conditions and issues present themselves as well as how they can be prevented in the first place and best practice in assessment and treatment It will therefore be a valuable resource for families support workers and health professionals Promoting the Health and Well-Being of People with Learning Disabilities Pauline

Heslop, Crispin Hebron, 2020-07-25 This textbook presents a practical guide for new and experienced health or social care staff helping them promote the health and well being of people with learning disabilities Given the considerable demand for mandatory training on supporting people with learning disabilities especially in England the book provides a valuable resource for all training courses on working with people with learning disabilities The chapters are co written by practitioners and people with learning disabilities and their families rooting the book in the lived experiences of those concerned Topics covered include core elements of being happy and healthy communication changes in our behaviour when we are unwell making decisions about our health accessing health services how we would want to be treated if we were unwell the use of psychotropic medication what a good death would be and how to keep ourselves healthy In addition the chapters include narrative examples concerning people with learning disabilities and their families so as to highlight key points and share best practice examples The use of personal reflection is used to consider how we can ensure that people with learning disabilities receive care and support that matches what we would expect for ourselves Core questions at the end of each chapter ask the reader to reflect on how the chapter content relates to their own work and how they will apply what they have learned A consistent theme throughout the book is equality of opportunity for people with learning disabilities to achieve good health There is now substantial evidence that people with learning disabilities have poorer health than the general population are more likely to have multiple health needs and can experience difficulties in having their illnesses diagnosed and treated promptly This book aims to help those supporting people with learning disabilities to achieve more equal outcomes The Psychologist, 2004 Nursing Times, Nursing Mirror, 2001 Health Care Provision and People with Learning Disabilities Jo Corbett, 2006-12-15 This book provides clear information that will assist mainstream health care providers in gaining greater understanding of people with learning disabilities and managing their health needs Each chapter gives the reader information and guidance on dealing with a variety of situations found in health care settings Examples of good practice are explained using case examples and experiences of people with learning disabilities and their carers The book describes what is expected from the various health care teams and offers solutions to potential challenges and barriers they may be faced with It includes information regarding specialist support services that can offer assistance to the individual and to the mainstream staff teams While ideas are also offered on how to present information in a format people who have communication difficulties can understand Parenting with Mild Intellectual Deficits Heather L. Doescher, 2008 Child Protection Chris Beckett, 2003 This book offers an introduction to child protection work Transformative Professional Practice Pamela Denicolo, Maureen Pope, 2001 Combining critical reflectivity and pragmatic guidance this book is designed to meet the needs of professionals in the public and private sector whose work involves them in developing their own and others knowledge and practice The book begins by providing a thoroughly referenced review of the philosophies and theories underpinning current approaches to professional education as a basis for demonstrating the particular salience and implications of a Personal Construct Psychology approach for practice and research This establishes a conceptual framework for the extensive practical guidance which follows on how to implement with rigour and sensitivity a range of techniques from the traditional structured repertory grid to more flexible innovative strategies for exploring how the world is or might be construed A selection of exemplar applications from a variety of fields of professional practice illustrates the elasticity of the approach and methods challenging readers to adapt the ideas presented as a catalytic resource to the development of professional practice and research
