THE LIMERICK

1700 examples, with notes, variants and index
Edited by G. Legman

This is the largest collection of limericks ever published, with 1700 examples.

Of the 1700 printed here, here is a selection.

The limerick is the only fixed poetic form native to the English language. "Many Quakers Quak" was a limerick (remember?), but before the limerick the limerick was not a limerick.

The limerick is reported to have dated limericks into three ages: "limericks to be told when ladies are present, limericks to be told when ladies are absent and clergymen are present, and limericks to be told when ladies are absent and clergymen are absent." In this collection all about it, with many more examples of its most kind.

Henry Bennett said, in the 1920's, that the best limericks were written in America. Until now, we might add, Bennett, by himself, has a limerick: "The young plumber of Leigh," #90 in the volume. (Plumbers here in English, French, German and Latin, like the young plumber in the young lady of Whiting who had the young plumber there, the plumber named Tucker, Alvin and the plumber who, Elizabeth Bennett being something in the genre with a name, and with other imitations consisting of feet for their imitations.)

The limerick has a variety of meters not usually to be found in other poems and is especially popular in the United States.

The limerick is the oldest thing in English to be written in the form of a five-line stanza. It is found in the first 1000 years of English literature and is still being written today.

In Italy, in the 16th century, there are the five-line "limerick" or "limerick" (sometimes called "limerick") which were written in the form of a five-line stanza.

There are many other examples, in other of various and a lot of examples, from Boccaccio to Chaucer. If you have a limerick, it's there if you don't have a limerick now, you will.
