Triggerplants Douglas W. Darnowski,2002 Triggerplants are not only found in Australia but they reach their greatest diversity there A few species have ranges which extend to India China or Japan with several more in Papua New Guinea but of the nearly two hundred identified species the great majority are found in Australia Triggerplants may be carnivorous after all but that has to do with the glistening hairs below the flowers Triggerplants grow in the same poor soils favoured by carnivorous plants poor soils in which carnivorous plants have an advantage in that they can obtain nitrogen from their prey In fact when you find a triggerplant there is usually a known carnivorous plant nearby And interestingly enough triggerplants have similar glandular hairs stalked and secreting a glue like mucilage which trap insects just like the hairs of sundews and rainbow plants It might be argued what is the point for the triggerplant to trap insects which are catching its pollen but triggerplants cleverly trap insects much too small to help them with pollination This is the first comprehensive book on triggerplants There is a chapter on triggerplants in the garden and landscape which includes how to grow them and how to obtain them eg seed sources The Gardeners' Chronicle ,1874 The Consolidated Library Orison Swett Marden,1907 The Garden ,1906 The Floricultural Cabinet, and Florists Magazine ,1885 General Index to the First Twenty Volumes of the Journal (Botany), and the Botanical Portion of the Proceedings, November 1838 to June 1886, of the Linnean Society Linnean Society of London,1888 The Gardener's Monthly and Horticulturist ,1879 Principia botanica, or, Beginnings of botany Léon Croizat,1961 Poole's Index to Periodical Literature: First supplement, January 1, 1882-January 1, 1887 William Frederick Poole,William Isaac Fletcher,1888
