H. Rhodes,2015-08-05 Excerpt from The Case of Summerfield The greatest master of the short story our country has known found his inspiration and produced his best work in California It is now nearly forty years since The Luck of Roaring Camp appeared and a line of successors more or less worthy have been following along the trail blazed by Bret Harte They have given us matter of many kinds realistic romantic tragic humorous weird In this mass of material much that was good has been lost The columns of newspapers swallowed some weeklies that lived for a brief day carried others to the grave with them Now and then chance or design interposed and some fragment of value was not allowed to perish It is matter for congratulation that the story in this volume was one of those saved from oblivion In 1871 a San Francisco paper

The Case of Summerfield - Original Edition William Henry Rhodes, 2020-12-04 A few days since we called public attention to the singular conduct of James G Wilkins justice of the peace for the Cape Horn district in this county in discharging without trial a man named Parker who was as we still think seriously implicated in the mysterious death of an old man named Summerfield who our readers will probably remember met so tragical an end on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad in the month of October last We have now to record another bold outrage on public justice in connection with the same affair The grand jury of Placer County has just adjourned without finding any bill against the person named above Not only did they refuse to find a true bill or to make any presentment but they went one step further toward the exoneration of the offender they specially ignored the indictment which our district attorney deemed it his duty to present The main facts in relation to the arrest and subsequent discharge of Parker may be summed up in few words
