

A CASE STUDY OF A CHILD WITH SPECIAL NEED/LEARNING DIFFICULTY

Researcher

Vipan Raj

Scholar PhD English

Sardar Patel University Balaghat,(MP)

Permanent Address:

Jagota, Teh: Bhella, District: Doda, State/UT: Jammu & Kashmir.

Abstract. The study has been conducted to investigate the levels and kind of difficulty the child/student is facing in learning things in or outside the classroom.

It also examines the relationship between the school and home environment of the student with special needs who is facing difficulty in learning i.e. reading, writing listening or speaking.

The case study was conducted by keen observations of the special needed child by involving and getting information directly from different reliable sources like, concerned teachers, peer groups from the school, parents, family members and peer groups of the child from the home environment. The tools used in the study were 1. Questionnaire. 2. Direct observation. Etc. The study reveals the fact that the child actually is not having any slow learners like problem nor she is shy or uninterested in learning by nature but she loves to read, learn, take part in different activities, she is having a creative mind by birth or nature but only the problem of her difficulties in learning is because of the depression she has laid in her mind of part of the home environment and improper treatment given to her by parents, family, teacher's, elder's in the school or at home.

Key words: concentrate, interactive, loneliness, aggressiveness, peer groups, shy, Sympathy, intellectual etc.

Introduction: In this activity I have taken a real situation of a student/ child of a village, Jagota of tehsil Bhella, District Doda Jammu & Kashmir (India) from class 6th from a government school with special need/learning difficulty where the student is not able to understand concepts, despite teachers' effort, a research based on a case study may be conducted to understand the reasons behind that and find a reliable, applicable and effective solution of the problem of the child/student.
