

A Short History of Australia

The Australian National Flag has three elements on a blue background: the Union Flag or Union Jack, the Commonwealth Star and the Southern Cross. The Union Jack in the upper left corner recognizes the history of British settlement. Below the Union Jack is a white Commonwealth or Federation star. It has seven points symbolizing the unity of the six states and the territories of the Commonwealth of Australia.

Early History

The first settlers arrived around 50,000 years ago. This was at a time when sea levels were lower and the land was less fertile. The central dry areas had not attracted settlers until about 25,000 years ago.

The population grew more and more around 10,000 years ago as the climate improved.

First Arrivals

17th century

The first European sightings of Australia were made by a Dutchman called Willem Janszoon on the Duyfken (Little Dove). Janszoon sailed into Australian waters charting 300 km of the coast. Later Louis Vaez de Torres sailed through the Torres Strait, later named after him. Both Captains sighted the Cape York Peninsula.

It was in 1644 that Dutch explorer Abel Tasman proclaimed that Australia was made up of four coasts North, West, East and South. The Australian state of Tasmania was named after this famous explorer.

18th – 19th century:

1770 Captain James Cook mapped the island's east coast and claimed the land for Great Britain

First Settlements

In 1788 the First Fleet arrived at Sydney Cove under Captain Arthur Phillip to establish the first settlement in Australia, a penal colony. In time that became Sydney. The date of his arrival, 26 January, is still today celebrated as Australia Day. Also in 1788, at the time of British settlement at Sydney Cove, it is estimated that 300,000 Aboriginal people inhabited Australia. They spoke around 300 different languages. On arrival the Europeans took the land as their own. The Aboriginal people were thrown out of their homes and many of them were killed. Various newly arrived European diseases led to a rapid increase in epidemics. The introduction of wild and domestic animals contributed to the destruction of the natural environment. Fighting killed the Aboriginal population in Tasmania and greatly reduced their numbers in the rest of Australia.

Civilization and Integration

20th century:

During the early part of the 20th century laws were passed to protect Aboriginals. This, however, involved restrictions on where they could live and work. After World War II, integration became the government's aim and attempts were made to 'Europeanise' them. During the 1960s, legislation was changed and the Federal Government passed laws for all Aboriginals to be given citizen status. In 1972, the native people were given back limited rights to their own land. The situation has steadily improved for Australia's native people, although more remains to be done.
