Automating Knowledge Acquisition For Expert Systems:

Automating Knowledge Acquisition for Expert Systems Sandra Marcus, 2013-03-08 In June of 1983 our expert systems research group at Carnegie Mellon University began to work actively on automating knowledge acquisition for expert systems In the last five years we have developed several tools under the pressure and influence of building expert systems for business and industry These tools include the five described in chapters 2 through 6 MORE MOLE SALT KNACK and SIZZLE One experiment conducted jointly by developers at Digital Equipment Corporation the Soar research group at Carnegie Mellon and members of our group explored automation of knowledge acquisition and code development for XCON also known as R1 a production level expert system for configuring DEC computer systems This work influenced the development of RIME a programming methodology developed at Digital which is the subject of chapter 7 This book describes the principles that guided our work looks in detail at the design and operation of each tool or methodology and reports some lessons learned from the enterprise of the work brought out in the introductory chapter is A common theme that much power can be gained by understanding the roles that domain knowledge plays in problem solving Each tool can exploit such an understanding because it focuses on a well defined problem solving method used by the expert systems it builds Each tool chapter describes the basic problem solving method assumed by the tool and the leverage provided by committing to the method

Valtorta,DUKE UNIV DURHAM NC DEPT OF COMPUTER SCIENCE.,1987* Automating rule strengths in expert systems is a way to alleviate the knowledge acquisition bottleneck It is assumed that rules are fixed except for the values of their strengths which are computed or adjusted from initial values given by experts A model of expert systems is proposed in which rules have the form IF P sub 1 P sub 2 P sub n THEN C WITH ATTENUATION a where P sub 1 P sub 2 P sub n and C are weighted propositions i e statements with a certainty factor CF and a the strength of the rule is a number between 0 and 1 To compute rule attenuations two problem settings are considered In the first an oracle is given that can provide the CFs of the conclusions of the entire rule based system given any assignment of certainty factors to the premises of the entire system complete case In the second a fixed set of cases is available incomplete case A fast algorithm for synthesis in the complete case for simple rule bases is given both for MAX and probabilistic sum In the incomplete case the synthesis of attenuations is shown to be NP Complete even for very shallow rule bases with only two propositions in the premise of each rule both for MAX and probabilistic sum The refinement of attenuations from expert given estimates is shown to be NP Hard no matter how close to the correct value the estimates are and how small an improvement towards the correct value is desired Author Proceedings ,1990 A Machine Learning Approach to Automated Construction of Knowledge Bases for Expert Systems for Remote Sensing Image Analysis with GIS Data ,1995 Knowledge based remote sensing image analysis with GIS data is acknowledged as a promising technique However the
