Public Private Partnerships for Urban Water Utilities Philippe Marin,2009-09-22 Public Private Partnerships for Urban Water Utilities A Review of Experiences in Developing Countries analyzes the market growth of Public Private Partnerships PPPs in the developing world since 1990 and the performance of more than 65 large water PPP projects representing more than 100 million people for access service quality operational efficiency and tariff levels Although a relatively small portion of the water utilities in the developing world are operated under PPPs about 7 percent in 2007 the urban population served by private water operators has grown every year since 1990 Despite many difficulties encountered by PPP projects and a few contract terminations a large majority of contracts awarded since 1990 are still in place The track record for improving service and efficiency reaffirms the value of PPPs to help turn around poorly performing water utilities even though the level of private financing did not match initial expectations Over time a more realistic market has developed the number of private investors from developing countries has grown and contract designs have become more pragmatic concerning risk allocations between partners The water sector has many features that set it apart from other infrastructure sectors This book suggests the need for careful consideration of those specificities to successfully involve private operators Although concessions with private financing have worked in a few places contractual arrangements that combine private operation with public financing appear to be the most sustainable option in many countries Policy makers stakeholders and donors need to remain heavily engaged in the water sector especially in the poorest countries and during a global financial crisis This book contributes to a better understanding of the various options to tackle the many challenges of providing water and sanitation services to urban populations in the developing world

Public Private Partnerships in the Water Sector Cledan Mandri-Perrott,David Stiggers,2013-07-31 Public sector funding and resources are often inadequate to meet increasing demands for investment and effective management and a growing case history shows increasing involvement by the private sector in provision of infrastructure and services through PPP arrangements The objective of this book is to determine and make recommendations on means of optimizing the use of Public Private Partnerships PPP in development of infrastructure whilst ensuring the sustainable long term provision of water and waste water services The focus is on providing detailed recommendations on contractual issues and contract structures to achieve this objective Public Private Partnerships in the Water Sector Innovation and Financial Sustainability Identifies what is needed to establish effective and sustainable water and wastewater service reform when using a PPP arrangement and importantly how those issues can be addressed contractually Provides specific recommendations of a comprehensive and detailed approach to contract drafting to

Cities and their water utilities must provide services within a complex mosaic of policies and regulations provided by national and provincial governments. In China as throughout the world water is also a sensitive political issue. Governments are keen to provide good water service but also attuned to the need to ensure that tariffs are socially acceptable. This report presents a strategic framework and set of recommendations for addressing these challenges and accelerating improvements in China's urban water utilities. Drawing upon the World Bank's experience in China as well as the Bank's global knowledge the report provides a comprehensive assessment of urban water services including policy regulatory institutional financial and technical issues. The report will prove a valuable resource for policy makers utility companies and anyone interested in the development of the world's largest water market.

Public-Private Partnerships in Sub-Saharan Africa James Leigland, 2020-04-29 Expectations are high regarding the potential benefits of public private partnerships (PPPs) for infrastructure development in low income countries. The development community led by the G20 the United Nations and others expects these partnerships between governments and private companies in infrastructure service provision to aid transformational mega projects as well as efforts to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals. Yet PPPs have been widely used only since the 1990s and discussion of their efficacy is still dominated by best practice guidance academic studies that focus on developed countries or ideological criticism. Meanwhile practitioners have quietly accumulated a large body of empirical evidence on the actual performance of PPPs. The purpose of this book is to summarize and consolidate what this critical mass of evidence based research indicates about PPPs in low income countries and thereby develop a more realistic perspective on the practical value of these mechanisms. With a primary focus on Sub Saharan Africa though drawing on critical insights from other regions it demonstrates that the benefits of such partnerships will only be realised if expectations remain modest and projects are subject to transparent evaluation and competition.

Drawing on an extensive database expert analysis case studies and hundreds of graphic elements it is the most comprehensive undertaking to date of freshwater assessment providing a mechanism for monitoring changes in the resource and its management and progress towards achieving development targets particularly the Millennium Development Goals. Building on the conclusions of the first United Nations World Water Development Report Water for People Water for Life the 2006 Report confirms the ongoing serious and growing water crisis essentially a crisis of governance and points to a prevalent lack of capacity and knowledge base as today's primary obstacles to achieving the necessary levels of water governance. This volume proposes a more integrated vision of water resources management to respond to changing environmental and socio economic conditions. Publisher's description
