Seidel, Ronald E. Anderson, Beverly Hunter, 2014-05-10 Computer Literacy Issues and Directions for 1985 is based on a conference entitled National Goals for Computer Literacy in 1985 held in Reston Virginia on December 18 20 1980 under the auspices of the National Science Foundation The conference provided a forum for discussing views on computer literacy as well as methods for infusion of computer related objectives and activities into existing curricula for different age levels Issues and barriers to developing national goals for achieving a computer literate society in the United States are also examined Comprised of 31 chapters this book begins by presenting four major approaches to a perspective on computer literacy impact of computer literacy on the citizenry major national components of a computer literacy program development of an information handling curriculum for an evolving computer literacy concept and a 30 year historical overview of computer events in three strands research development technology education and social political institutional The next section considers the definitions and requirements of computer literacy as they impact society students and teachers The use of the computer in cognitive research and in problem solving is also discussed together with curriculum development in computer literacy This monograph will be of interest to students teachers school administrators and educational policymakers      Computers for People Jack B. consider What should a computer literate student be able to do What is required of literacy teachers to educate such a student How can functional computer literacy fit within the values of teaching writing and communication as a profession Reimagining functional literacy in ways that speak to teachers of writing and communication he builds a framework for computer literacy instruction that blends functional critical and rhetorical concerns in the interest of social action and change Multiliteracies for a Digital Age reviews the extensive literature on computer literacy and critiques it from a humanistic perspective This approach which will remain useful as new versions of computer hardware and software inevitably replace old versions helps to usher students into an understanding of the biases belief systems and politics inherent in technological contexts Selber redefines rhetoric at the nexus of technology and literacy and argues that students should be prepared as authors of twenty first century texts that defy the established purview of English departments The result is a rich portrait of the ideal multiliterate student in a digital age and a social approach to computer literacy envisioned with the requirements for systemic change in mind
