Bristol Aircraft Since 1910 Christopher Henry Barnes, 1988 The History of Air Intercept Radar & the British Nightfighter 1935-1959 Ian White, 2007-05-30 This detailed history of Air Intercept radar traces the development of this vital military technology with the Royal Air Force during WWII In the years after World War I the United Kingdom was desperate to develop some form of protection from an enemy air strike As early as 1923 the British Army had devised sound mirrors that could detect aircraft up to twelve miles away This technical history traces the development of military radar technology from this early experimental phase to the creation of the first air to air radar systems and their uses in battle Historian Ian White sets this fascinating narrative within the larger political military economic and technological context of the era Through World War II Air Intercept radar was a vital asset in protecting RAF bomber forces as well as the country itself But developing the technology required the tireless work of physicists and engineers in the Air Ministry Research Establishment particularly members of the Establishment s Airborne Group working under Dr Edward Bowen Their Airborne Interception radars such as the AI Mk IV were used in Blenheim night fighters during the winter Blitz and by Mosquito during the Baedeker Raids This in depth history covers the introduction of centimetric technology at the Telecommunications Research Establishment the creation of centimetric AI and their installation in the Beaufighter and later marks of the Mosquito It describes the creation of the Radiation Laboratory at MIT and concludes with a section on further developments during the Cold War Westland and the British Helicopter Industry, 1945-1960 Matthew R.H. Uttley, 2014-05-22 This study explains how Westland dominated British helicopter production and why government funding and support failed to generate competitive all British alternatives In doing so the book evaluates broader historiographic assumptions about the purported failure of british aircraft procurement during the early post war period and considers the scope and limitations of licensed production as a government mandated procurement strategy Aeronautics Mary Kay Briggs, United States. Air Force. Pacific Air Forces, 1971 Speedbird Robin Higham, 2013-05-30 Between 1939 and 1946 BOAC the British Overseas Airways Corporation was the nationalised airline of Great Britain and between 1946 and 1974 as such it exclusively operated all long haul British flights With its iconic Speedbird logo and its central role in the glamorous jet age of the 1950s and 1960s BOAC achieved a near cult status with admirers around the globe Yet to date there has been no comprehensive history of the organisation covering its structure fleet and the role it played in the critical events of the age from World War II to the end of empire a period when BOAC played a pivotal part in projecting British political power even as that power was waning During World War II BOAC operated a limited wartime service and prepared for the return of commercial flight in the postwar era But it was in the service of Britain s colonies and latterly the process of decolonisation that BOAC achieved its most pivotal role The development of flight technology enabled much faster connections between Britain and her imperial possessions as the colonies prepared for independence BOAC ferried diplomats politicians and colonial administrators between London and the far flung corners of Africa and Asia in much faster times than had previously been possible In this book acclaimed historian Robin Higham presents a unique comprehensive study of BOAC from the early jet travel of the de Havilland Comet and the Vickers VC10 to the dawn of supersonic passenger aviation Highly illustrated and meticulously researched using previously unseen sources this book will be essential reading for all aviation enthusiasts and anyone interested in the history of modern Britain
