British Universities:

British Universities Past and Present Robert Anderson, 2006-09-27 This book is both a concise history of British universities and their place in society over eight centuries and a penetrating analysis of current university problems and policies as seen in the light of that history It explains how the modern university system has developed since the Victorian era and gives special attention to changes in policy since the Second World War including the effects of the Robbins report the rise and fall of the binary system the impact of the Thatcher era and the financial crises which have beset universities in recent years A final chapter on the past and the present shows the continuing relevance of the ideals inherited from the past and makes an important contribution to current controversies by identifying a distinctively British university model and discussing the historical relationship of state and market

Reports from Those Universities and Univ. Colleges in Great Britain which Participated in the Parliamentary Grant for University Colleges, 1913 Scientific Research in British Universities and Colleges, 1968 Decolonizing Global Intelligence Pak Nung Wong, 2025-07-24 From September 11 to the calamitous withdrawal of United States troops from Afghanistan Western intelligence has failed to negotiate the largest military and humanitarian crises across the world This book proposes to decolonize global intelligence from the peripheries of the Global South and put forward a new intelligence practice of inclusive statecraft It shows how dominant Western intelligence systems have failed to protect the very ideas they promised to uphold and the discrepancy between the West's Responsibility to Protect R2P liberalist doctrine and the realist on the ground complex reality as observed by the Failure to Protect F2P scholarships Drawing theoretical insights and empirical both historical and contemporary materials from a wide array of case studies of Western and non Western intelligence settings and practices as well as their interactions it argues that the next generation of global security and intelligence practitioners will necessitate genuine interracial non anthropocentric and cross cultural inclusivity especially the capability to take the non Western intelligence cultures and their realist strategic thoughts seriously This book will not just add new knowledge to the larger field of security and intelligence studies but will also pioneer the relatively underdeveloped fields of comparative intelligence cultures and interstellar intelligence cultural studies It will be indispensable for policymakers bureaucrats and government officials

Staff Development Programmes in British Universities and Polytechnics Gordon W. Miller, 1976

British Universities Sydney Caine, 1969-12-15 Since the last war there have been enormous increases in the numbers of universities and of students Yet it tends to be assumed that the concepts which were valid for the dozen or so universities and the tens of thousands of students of the 1900 s are still valid for the fifty universities and the hundreds of thousands of students of today Sir Sydney Caine was Director of the London School of Economics from 1957-67 Before that he had been for four years Vice Chancellor of the University of Malaya and had served for twenty five years in the Civil Service in the Colonial Office in the Colonial Service as Financial Secretary of Hong Kong and in the Treasury He is thus equipped to give a balanced assessment of the state of British universities today when their almost complete financial dependence on the state makes the relationship between the universities and the Government one of the central topics in any such discussion The book examines a number of inter related questions which are seldom asked What are the objectives of a university Is there a proper balance between teaching and research Is it right that secondary school curricula should be to so great an extent determined by university entrance requirements With the increase in their numbers are graduates any longer in any sense an elite What are the underlying causes of the current malaise among students What is the value of university education to the society which provides it and should there be a special tax on graduates earnings What is the role of universities in relation to other forms of further education How and to what extent should teachers and students participate in university government Can alternative methods of financing universities be found which will give students a greater sense of responsibility and lead to the loosening of wasteful rigidities of organisation in degree patterns length of courses etc Much of the confusion of purpose evident in higher educational policy today has risen because these and related questions have not been asked Sir Sydney Caine examines them fairly and thoroughly weighting the need to respect academic independence against the public interest The result is a most stimulating discussion on a topic of vital concern for the future of Britain
