

British Black English

British Black English are British citizens of either African descent or of Black African-Caribbean (sometimes called "Afro-Caribbean"). The term Black British developed in the 1950s, referring to the Black British West Indian people from the former Caribbean British colonies in the West Indies (i.e., the New Commonwealth) now referred to as the Windrush Generation and people from Africa, who are residents of the United Kingdom and are British.

The variety of Jamaican Creole still used by some British Blacks is known as Patois or British Jamaican Creole. London Jamaican, for instance, is the London variety of Patois. It derives from Jamaican Creole, but it has a number of features which distinguish it from the Jamaican variety.

Some young British Blacks use Patois for in-group talk as a symbol of their ethnicity, but not all are proficient users. The use of Patois, as well as the use of Patois features in informal varieties of English, obviously has an important symbolic function. These varieties signal a person's ethnicity as British Black.

There are lexical items such as lick meaning 'hit' and kenge meaning 'weak, puny'. There are many features of pronunciation, including stress and intonation patterns, which differ from those of standard English. The vowel sound in a word like home is sometimes pronounced as in Jamaican Creole, rather than as in the local variety of English. Words like then and thin are pronounced [den] and [tin]. Plural forms don't have s on the end. Tenses aren't marked by suffixes on verbs, so forms like walk and jump are used rather than

Black English Joey Lee Dillard,1972 This book attempts to investigate the important and interesting ways in which Black English the language of about eighty percent of Americans of African Ancestry differs from other varieties of American English According to my thesis differences from other English dialects are traceable to normal historical factors specifically to language contact phenomena associated with the West African slave trade and with European maritime expansion in general and to survivals from West African languages From foreword Global Black Narratives for the Classroom:

Britain and Europe BLAM UK,2024-01-26 Rather than reserving the teaching of Black history to Black history month Black narratives deserve to be seen and integrated into every aspect of the school curriculum A unique yet practical resource Global Black Narratives addresses this issue by providing primary teachers with a global outline of Black history culture and Teachers will gain essential contextual knowledge and the practical skills to deliver lessons exploring many examples of Black Britain dating as far back as the Tudor period. Detailed lesson plans are provided on numerous activist groups and figures who make up the Black British civil rights movement, including Claudia Jones, Harold Moody, Stuart Hall, Amy Ashwood, The West African Students Union, the Bristol bus boycott, and resistance groups from the 1960s to 1980s. Many of the lesson plans also concern music and wider arts and culture. Part 2 explores Black Presence in Europe, providing focused examples of Black narratives. Topics explored include Negritude, Josephine Baker, Afro Spaniards, and the Moorish occupation of Spain, Afro Surinamese people in the Netherlands, and Black presence in France. Created by BLAM UK, this highly informative yet practical resource is an essential read for any teacher, teaching assistant, or senior leader who wishes to diversify their curriculum and address issues of Black representation within their school. It is published in two practical and comprehensive volumes. Volume 1 covers Britain and Europe, whilst Volume 2 includes Africa, the Americas, and the Caribbean. Each volume can be used individually for teaching, but when used together, they provide a truly global perspective on Black history and culture.
