Dyslexia in First and Foreign Language Learning Monika Lodej, 2016-08-17 According to International Educational Statistics 2008 there are total of 654 9 million school age children in the world If dyslexia affects 10 15% of these youth Fletcher et al 2007 this translates to approximately 65 98

million students with difficulties in reading and writing The EU strategic plan for education 2010 recognises the need for EU citizens to speak a foreign language As such foreign language courses are introduced on an obligatory basis at the primary level of education Dyslexic students are not exempt from this regulation and thus are confronted with different language systems that must be mastered The difficulty here escalates if the systems differ significantly in their levels of orthographic transparency Reading and writing are operationalised by the same biological functions that are defined by the universal perspective However language systems differ in terms of their transparency for example English and French are considered opaque scripts whereas Spanish and Italian are described as transparent orthographies These differences are discussed in this book as part of the language specific perspective which can in turn raise questions such as Is a dyslexic student equally impaired in any language they study and Is the type of difficulty primarily dependent on the language system or is it rather a dyslexia syndrome This volume provides answers through a synthesis of research on reading difficulties in first and foreign languages and existing taxonomies of dyslexia sub types
