The American Fur Trade of the Far West Hiram Martin Chittenden, 1902 French Fur Traders and Voyageurs in the American West LeRoy Reuben Hafen, Janet

Lecompte,1997-01-01 Frenchmen were far ahead of Englishmen in the early Far West not only prior in time but greater in numbers and in historical importance writes Janet Lecompte in her introduction to French Fur Traders and Voyageurs in the American West They were the first to navigate the Mississippi and its tributaries and they founded St Louis and New Orleans Though France lost her North American possessions in 1763 thousands of her natives remained on the continent Many of them were voyageurs for Hudson s Bay Company whose descendants would join American fur trade companies plying the trans Mississippi West This volume documents the fact that in the nineteenth century Frenchmen dominated the fur trade in the United States Twenty two biographies collected from LeRoy R Hafen s classic ten volume The Mountain Men and the Fur Trade of the Far West represent a variety of origins and social classes types of work and trading areas Here are trappers who joined John Jacob Astor s ill fated fur venture on the Pacific St Louis traders who hauled goods to Spanish New Mexico along the Santa Fe Trail and those who traded with Indians in the western plains and mountains The Subarctic Indians and the Fur Trade, 1680-1860 Colin Yerbury,2011-11-01 Using the accounts of fur traders explorers officials and missionaries Colin Yerbury documents the profound changes that swept over the Athapaskan speaking people of the Canadian subarctic following European contact He challenges with a rich variety of historical documents the frequently articulated view that there is a general cultural continuity from the pre contact period to the twentieth century Leaving to the domain of the archaeologists the pre historic period when all the people of the vast area from approximately 52N to the edge of the tundra and from Hudson Bay to Alaska were hunters fishers and gatherers subsisting entirely on native resources Yerbury focuses on the Protohistoric and Historic Periods The ecological and sociocultural adaptations of the Athapaskans are explored through the two centuries when they moved from indirect contact to dependency on the Hudson Bay trading posts For nearly one hundred years prior to 1769 when North West Company traders began to establish trading relationships in the heart of Athapaskan territory contacts with Europeans were almost entirely indirect conducted through Chipewyan middlemen who jealously guarded their privileged access to the posts The boundaries of the indirect trade areas fluctuated owing to intertribal rivalries but generally the hardships of travel over great distances prevented the Athapaskans from establishing direct contact with the posts The pattern was only broken by the gradual expansion of the traders themselves into new regions But as Yerbury shows it is a mistake to believe significant sociocultural change only began when posts were established In fact technological changes and economic adjustments to facilitate trade had already transformed Athapaskan groups and integrated them into the European commercial system by the opening of the Historic Era The Early Fur Trade Period 1770 1800 was characterized by local trade centered on a few posts where Indians were simultaneously post hunters trappers and traders as well as middlemen But the following Competitive Trade Period before the amalgamation of the fur companies in 1821 saw ruinous and violent feuding which had devastating effects on traders and natives alike During these years there were great qualitative changes in the native way of life and the debt system was introduced Finally in the Trading

Post Dependency Period monopoly control brought peace and stability to the native population through the formation of trading post bands and trapping parties in the Athapaskan and Mackenzie Districts This regularization of the trade and proliferation of new commodities represented a further basic transformation in native productive relations making trade a necessity rather than a supplement to furnishing native livelihoods By detailing this series of changes The Subarctic Indians and the Fur Trade 1680 1860 furthers understanding of how the Hudson s Bay Company and then government officials came to play an increasing role that the Dene themselves now wish to modify drastically □□□□ ,2008 Fur Trade Review Weekly ,1896 Historic Landmarks A. L. Van Osdel,1912 Indians in the Fur Trade Arthur J. Ray,1998-12-15 First published in 1974 this best selling book was lauded by Choice as an important ground breaking study of the Assiniboine and western Cree Indians who inhabited southern Manitoba and Saskatchewan and essential reading for anyone interested in the history of the Canadian west before 1870 Indians in the Fur Trade makes extensive use of previously unpublished Hudson s Bay Company archival materials and other available data to reconstruct the cultural geography of the West at the time of early contact illustrating many of the rapid cultural transformations with maps and diagrams Now with a new introduction and an update on sources it will continue to be of great use to students and scholars of Native and Canadian history

Adventures of Indian-fighters, Hunters, and Fur-traders George Bird Grinnell,1913 A Comparative Analysis of Two Early Fur Trade Period Sites on the Lower Columbia River of Oregon and Washington Rachel K. Stokeld,2016 The Lower Chinook of the Lower Columbia River are among the first Natives in the region to have direct contact with Euroamericans in the late 1700s When maritime fur traders arrived on the Columbia River soon after the Lower Chinook actively engaged in the trade incorporating foreign traders and goods into the pre existing inter tribal trading system Potentially hundreds of ships visited and two terrestrial fur trade companies operated posts on the Lower Columbia River during the early fur trade period ca 1790 1820 but descriptions of their activities and the goods they traded are largely lacking Archaeological analysis can increase knowledge of little understood periods in history through identifying patterns in material culture and connecting them to socio historical factors The purpose of this thesis is to identify variations and similarities within the two earliest fur trade associated assemblages on the Lower Columbia one Native and one Euroamerican in context to address questions regarding the earliest adoption of mass produced European and Chinese material culture among the Lower Columbia Chinook This will be accomplished by comparative analysis of trade goods imported by Euroamerican traders during the early fur trade period as identified through examination historic records
