Dynasties

THE HAN DYNASTY (206 BCE-220 CE)

One of the greatest and longest dynasties in ancient China was the Han Dynasty. This dynasty lasted from 206 BCE to 220 CE- that's over 400 years! The Han Dynasty helped make China stronger after the Qin Dynasty which made China more peaceful. Liu Bang was the first emperor who was a farmer before he became the leader. Bang wanted to ruler with more fairness than the Qin rulers and he helped make life better for the people of China. During this time, China grew and became richer. Roads, canals, and walls were built to keep the country safe and help with trade. The famous Silk Road was created during the Han Dynasty and was a long trade route that connected China to other areas in China. The road was used by people to buy and sell things like spices, silk, and gold. People also learned about each other's customs.

They also made important advancements in medicine, farming, and science. They even invented the wheelbarrow! Knowledge and education were valued. The Han emperors supported Confucius who taught that people should be good. They went to school to learn how to read and write so they could be good. The government set up exams so the smartest people could work for the government. The Han Dynasty ended after many years of fighting. The Han Dynasty is known as a time of great achievement and invention. Many people in China still call it the golden age of the Han Dynasty.
