

DECLARATION OF INTERDEPENDENCE (1976)

Preamble

When in the course of history the threat of extinction confronts mankind, it is necessary for the people of the United States to declare their interdependence with the people of all nations and to embrace those principles and build those institutions which will enable mankind to survive and civilization to flourish.

Two centuries ago our forefathers brought forth a new nation; now we must join with others to bring forth a new world order. On this historic occasion it is proper that the American people should reaffirm those principles on which the United States of America was founded, acknowledge the new crisis which confronts them, accept the new obligations which history imposes upon them, and set forth the causes which impel them to affirm before all people their commitment to a Declaration of Interdependence.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal, that the inequalities and injustices which afflict so much of the human race as the product of history and society, not of God or nature, that people everywhere are entitled to the blessings of life and liberty, peace and security and the realization of their full potential; that they have an inescapable moral obligation to preserve those rights for posterity, and that to achieve these ends all the peoples and nations of the globe should acknowledge their interdependence and join together to dedicate their minds and their hearts to the solution of those problems which threaten their survival.

To establish a new world order of compassion, peace, justice and security. It is essential that mankind free itself from the limitations of national prejudice, and acknowledge that the forces that unite it are incomparably deeper than those that divide it – that all people are part of one global community, dependent on one body of resources, bound together by the ties of a common humanity and associated in a common adventure on the planet earth.

Let us then join together to vindicate and realize this great truth that mankind is one, and as one will nobly save or irreparably lose the heritage of thousands of years of civilization to survive.

Reimagining Science Education in the Anthropocene Maria F. G. Wallace, Jesse Bazzul, Marc Higgins, Sara Tolbert, 2021-12-07 This open access edited volume invites transdisciplinary scholars to re-vision science education in the era of the Anthropocene. The collection assembles the works of educators from many walks of life and areas of practice together to help reorient science education toward the problems and peculiarities associated with the geologic times many call the Anthropocene. It has become evident that science education the way it is currently institutionalized in various forms of school science government policy classroom practice educational research and public private research laboratories is ill equipped and ill conceived to deal with the expansive and urgent contexts of the Anthropocene. Paying homage to myopic knowledge systems rigid state education directives and academic professional communities intent on reproducing the same practices knowledges and relationships that have endangered our shared world and shared presents presence is misdirected. This volume brings together diverse scholars to reimagine the field in times of precarity.

A Declaration of Interdependence Robert G. Edwards, 2004-04 This book is for the inquisitive persons who are not too sure how as humans they appeared on this planet and what they ought to do with their existence. It is for people who fear being ostracized and stigmatized for not being believers in established religious dogma. It is for persons whose fear of death shapes their lives. By pulling together the thoughts of past and living human of intelligence he shapes a philosophy for interdependent living in our world free from theological shackles. The author illustrates that the development of science and philosophy progress hand in hand.

The central position of agriculture within the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development Omilola, Babatunde, Robele, Sophia, 2017-11-15 This paper provides a helpful framing to understand both why and how policy attention and investments should be channeled through agriculture and agrifood systems as key vehicles for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). It illustrates the ways in which agriculture particularly within the context of food value chains is uniquely positioned to holistically address the social economic and environmental dimensions of sustainable development because of its existing reach and future potential. In this paper's examination of the multiplicity of entry points the sector offers for fostering inclusive and sustainable economic growth reversing harmful environmental trends and enhancing the resilience of the poorest and most vulnerable populations it traces some of the most potent pathways for agricultural policies and
