A Many-Splendoured Thing

"With her unfaltering honesty, fine balance and astonishing feel for the English language she has written an outstanding love story. That the story is her own, that physical love and dependence did not come easily to her, that she was irrevocably separated from the Englishman whom she loved, make her book all the more remarkable. But while she never loses the thread of her heart's theme, she weaves it into the hectic, over-crowded background of post-war Hongkong, where she worked until "as a Chinese and a doctor", not as a Communist, she could return to China. Whenever she moved in this shifting world of rich and poor Chinese refugees, of European big-business men, of idealists and realists of both continents, she brought away her own keen-edged impressions. In this sense her book is brilliantly topical but it is far more than that, for she handles an eternal theme with power, insight, and unflinching artistry" — Sunday Times

"This is one of the loveliest books I've read for a very long time" — Alan Melville on the B.B.C.
