Bridging the Theory-Practice Divide in International Relations Daniel Maliniak, Susan Peterson, Ryan Powers, Michael J. Tierney, 2020-05-01 There is a widening divide between the data tools and knowledge that international relations scholars produce and what policy practitioners find relevant for their work In this first of its kind conversation leading academics and practitioners reflect on the nature and size of the theory practice divide They find the gap varies by issue area and over time The essays in this volume use data gathered by the Teaching Research and International Policy TRIP Project over a fifteen year period As a whole the volume analyzes the structural factors that affect the academy's ability to influence policy across issue areas and the professional incentives that affect scholars' willingness to attempt to do so Individual chapters explore these questions in the areas of trade finance human rights development environment nuclear weapons and strategy interstate war and intrastate conflict Each substantive chapter is followed by a response from a policy practitioner providing their perspective on the gap and the possibility for academic work to have an impact

Bridging the Theory Practice Divide in International Relations provides concrete answers and guidance about how and when scholarship can be policy relevant

The Politics of Verification Nancy W. Gallagher, 1999-03-19 How to evaluate compliance is among the most difficult questions that arise during treaty negotiations and ratification debates Arguments over verification principles and procedures are increasingly common for accords about the environment human rights and economics but they have been especially important in the arena of national security Nancy Gallagher explains In a world in which states face conflicting pressures to maximize military capabilities and negotiate mutual restraints the prospects for arms control often hinge on verification In the standard American formulation verification is the critical element of arms control In The Politics of Verification Gallagher explores the causes of verification controversies and the processes through which they are perpetuated or provisionally resolved By examining nuclear test ban negotiations from the Eisenhower through the Clinton administrations Gallagher finds that the assumptions about verification that have dominated U S policy shape domestic debates in ways that hinder stable agreement on significant test restrictions She focuses on the dynamic interconnections between domestic and international politics and analyzes the slow process of coalition building when conflicting interests and ideas create divisions both among and inside states Gallagher concludes that the end of the Cold War has altered the arms control context without resolving basic questions about the appropriate amount and type of verification Thus the negotiation and ratification of major cooperative accords will continue to be shaped by verification compromises and coalitions

Based on the analysis of the actual disarmament process this book questions a number of sacred cows frequently encountered in international fora and thinking on economic aspects of disarmament The long debated link between disarmament and development for example is critically examined Similarly the very idea that disarmament would yield automatic returns the famous peace dividend is called into question At the same time conversion also has its cost For the purpose of the research which led to this publication United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research UNIDIR with the cooperation of International Defence Economics Association IDEA assembled a group of well known economists diplomats and researchers Forthcoming Books Rose Army,1998-04 The Politics of Negotiation Linda P.
