Marion Crawford,2015-07-01 Excerpt from Doctor Claudius A True Story I Believe I am old said the Doctor pushing his straight backed wooden chair from the table and turning from his books to look out of his small window Yes I am certainly very old he said again rapping absently on the arm of the chair with the pen he held But the fingers that held the instrument were neither thin nor withered and there was no trembling in the careless motion of the hand The flaxen hair long and tangled was thick on the massive head and the broad shoulders were flat and square across Whatever Dr Claudius might say of himself he certainly did not look old And yet he said to himself that he was and he probably knew He said to himself as he had said every day for many long months that this was the secret of the difference he felt between his life and the life of his companions such companions as he had between his thoughts and their thoughts between his ways and their ways About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of
