Doctor Dolittle In The Moon:

Doctor Dolittle in the Moon Hugh Lofting, 2020-09-28 In writing the story of our adventures in the Moon I Thomas Stubbins secretary to John Dolittle M D and son of Jacob Stubbins the cobbler of Puddleby on the Marsh find myself greatly puzzled It is not an easy task remembering day by day and hour by hour those crowded and exciting weeks It is true I made many notes for the Doctor books full of them But that information was nearly all of a highly scientific kind And I feel that I should tell the story here not for the scientist so much as for the general reader And it is in that I am perplexed For the story could be told in many ways People are so different in what they want to know about a voyage I had thought at one time Jip could help me and after reading him some chapters as I had first set them down I asked for his opinion I discovered he was mostly interested in whether we had seen any rats in the Moon I found I could not tell him I didn't remember seeing any and yet I am sure there must have been some or some sort of creature like a rat Then I asked Gub Gub And what he was chiefly concerned to hear was the kind of vegetables we had fed on Dab Dab snorted at me for my pains and said I should have known better than to ask him I tried my mother She wanted to know how we had managed when our underwear wore out and a whole lot of other matters about our living conditions hardly any of which I could answer Next I went to Matthew Mugg And the things he wanted to learn were worse than either my mother's or Jip's Were there any shops in the Moon What were the dogs and cats like The good Cats meat Man seemed to have imagined it a place not very different from Puddleby or the East End of London No trying to get at what most people wanted to read concerning the Moon did not bring me much profit I couldn't seem to tell them any of the things they were most anxious to know It reminded me of the first time I had come to the Doctor's house hoping to be hired as his assistant and dear old Polynesia the parrot had questioned me Are you a good noticer she had asked I had always thought I was pretty good anyhow But now I felt I had been a very poor noticer For it seemed I hadn't noticed any of the things I should have done to make the story of our voyage interesting to the ordinary public The trouble was of course attention Human attention is like butter you can only spread it so thin and no thinner If you try to spread it over too many things at once you just don't remember them And certainly during all our waking hours upon the Moon there was so much for our ears and eyes and minds to take in it is a wonder I often think that any clear memories at all remain The one who could have been of most help to me in writing my impressions of the Moon was Jamaro Bumblelily the giant moth who carried us there But as he was nowhere near me when I set to work upon this book I decided I had better not consider the particular wishes of Jip Gub Gub my mother Matthew or any one else but set the story down in my own way Clearly the tale must be in any case an imperfect incomplete one And the only thing to do is to go forward with it step by step to the best of my recollection from where the great insect hovered with our beating hearts pressed close against his broad back over the near and glowing landscape of the Moon

The Luminous Fairies and Mothra Takehiko Fukunaga, Yoshie Hotta, Shin'ichiro Nakamura, 2026-01-13 The original story that hatched Mothra one of the most beloved monsters in the kaijuverse available in English for the first time Mystical and benevolent the colossal lepidopteran Mothra has been one of the most beloved kaiju since 1961 when The Luminous Fairies and Mothra was originally published in Japanese Commissioned by T h Studios from three of Japan's most prominent postwar literary writers Shin ichir Nakamura Takehiko Fukunaga and Yoshie Hotta the novella formed the basis for the now classic monster film Mothra with a protagonist second only to Godzilla in number of film appearances by a kaiju Finally available in its first official English translation The Luminous Fairies and Mothra will captivate ardent longtime fans of the films as well as newcomers Written just months after the largest political demonstrations Japan had ever seen The Luminous Fairies and Mothra reflects the rebellious spirit of the time In this original story explorers visit a South Pacific island and capture a group of fairies inciting the fury of the goddess

Mothra who sets out for Japan on a mission of rescue and revenge Expressing a powerful social stance about Japan's need to chart its own foreign policy during the Cold War the novella's political message was ultimately toned down in the T h Studios film Through this translation Anglophone audiences will discover Mothra as a figure of protest fiction intricately reflecting the complex geopolitical situation in early 1960s Japan The Luminous Fairies and Mothra is translated into lively prose by Jeffrey Angles who also wrote an extensive afterword about the novella's cultural context the unusual story of its composition and the development of the 1961 film Following Angles's best selling translation of the original Godzilla novellas this new work will once again delight kaiju fans everywhere Retail e book files for this title are screen reader friendly with images accompanied by short alt text and or extended descriptions

From Soldier to Storyteller Kathleen Broome Williams, Hal M. Friedman, 2024-10-09 Many of the best known and most popular children's stories of the 20th and early 21st century were written by veterans of World War I and World War II These include works by such writers as A A Milne C S Lewis Roald Dahl Ian Fleming and J R R Tolkien among others Although they had experienced war most of the veterans did not overtly write about it The seeming paradox of warriors who went through searing combat and then wrote books for children has not been addressed collectively before now The essays in this book explore what motivated these veterans to write for children what they wrote and how their writing was influenced by the wars they lived through It examines how their combat experience can be traced in their writing however subtly whether it was stories about a bear and his piglet companion a World War I flying ace or a flying car Their reactions to war as reflected in their writing yield important lessons about the complicated legacy of the 20th century's two great conflicts and their long lasting impact through children on society at large
