environment can affect exercise related cognitions which in turn influence physical activity Findings of this and other research Owen et al 2000 Humpel et al 2002 Saelens et al 2003b Foster McCormack et al 2004 Owen et al 2004 Badland Duncan et al 2005 Heath et al 2006 support the need to create supportive environments that encourage both recreational and transport related physical activity Providing more opportunities and a greater variety of destinations close to home could encourage physical activity participation and may even assist some individuals to achieve sufficient levels to accrue health benefits However additional research is necessary to understand how both the perceived and objectively measured built environment influences physical activity and to provide evidence of temporal causality between environments cognitions and physical activity behaviour
