Animals and Men. Studies in Comparative Psychology, Etc. [Translated from the German by Alice I. Taylor and Herbert Sheldon Jackson.] David KATZ (Professor der Pädagogik und Philosophie in Rostock.),Herbert Sheldon Jackson,Alice I. TAYLOR,1937 Comparative Cognition Edward A. Wasserman,Thomas R. Zentall,2009-04-08 This volume celebrates comparative cognition s first quarter century with a state of the art collection of chapters covering the broad realm of the scientific study of animal intelligence Comparative Cognition will be an invaluable resource for students and professional researchers in all areas of psychology and neuroscience The Gap Thomas Suddendorf,2013-11-12 There exists an undeniable chasm between the capacities of humans and those of animals Our minds have spawned civilizations and technologies that have changed the face of the Earth whereas even our closest animal relatives sit unobtrusively in their dwindling habitats Yet despite longstanding debates the nature of this apparent gap has remained unclear What exactly is the difference between our minds and theirs In The Gap psychologist Thomas Suddendorf provides a definitive account of the mental qualities that separate humans from other animals as well as how these differences arose Drawing on two decades of research on apes children and human evolution he surveys the abilities most often cited as uniquely human language intelligence morality culture theory of mind and mental time travel and finds that two traits account for most of the ways in which our minds appear so distinct Namely our open ended ability to imagine and reflect on scenarios and our insatiable drive to link our minds together These two traits explain how our species was able to amplify qualities that we inherited in parallel with our animal counterparts transforming animal communication into language memory into mental time travel sociality into mind reading problem solving into abstract reasoning traditions into culture and empathy into morality Suddendorf concludes with the provocative suggestion that our unrivalled status may be our own creation and that the gap is growing wider not so much because we are becoming smarter but because we are killing off our closest intelligent animal relatives Weaving together the latest findings in animal behavior child development anthropology psychology and neuroscience this book will change the way we think about our place in nature A major argument for reconsidering what makes us human The Gap is essential reading for anyone interested in our evolutionary origins and our relationship with the rest of the animal kingdom Animal Behavior Desk Reference Edward M. Fasano, Riccardo Brambilla, 2024-07-03 Rodent behavioral testing has been used to study brain functions since the 1890s and has become a gold standard model in modern neuroscience Up to the 1950s most behavioral tests on laboratory rodent models were based on punishments and rewards Both approaches can lead to a certain degree of animal pain or suffering Punishments involved the employment of painful stimuli typically electric shocks Passive avoidance and fear conditioning tests among the most widely used behavioral paradigms used to evaluate learning and memory in rodents can be performed using only a single brief shock Other tests such as the active avoidance might require up to tens or hundreds of shocks strongly challenging the psychological welfare of the model animals On the other hand tests based on rewards which apparently may seem more ethical actually still induce suffering in the animals as food rewards are almost always associated with a food restriction protocol in order to motivate food seeking behavior Rodents are starved for days before starting the test and kept under food restriction for the whole duration of the test The distress during the testing session is only a minimal part compared to the stress lived outside of the testing session which is prolonged and continuous Analogously liquid rewards commonly rely on a previous water restriction protocol to use thirst as motivation Animal stress is not only an ethical issue per se but also an important factor potentially impacting on the reliability and reproducibility of experimental results
