Food as a Mechanism of Control and Resistance in Jails and Prisons Salvador Jiménez Murguía,2018-02-19 Murguia explores food and foodways within institutions of incarceration Food like all resources within total institutions is vulnerable to social manipulation Within jail and prison settings food becomes both a mechanism of control and resistance In the former the type of food its quality its quantity and the symbolic significance of its presence or absence all contribute to the socio political experience of the incarcerated perhaps even adding an extra form of punishment to one s sentence not measured in time but rather in terms of cruelty In the latter the incarcerated may view the preparation of food the innovation it may undergo its consumption or even the refusal of its consumption along these same socio political lines Thus viewing food within jail and prison as social facts that engender real consequences reveals a virtually uncharted area of research for understanding the intersection between food and life within the confines of incarceration Of this line of inquiry Murguia asks how food is employed as a means to control prisoners and conversely how do prisoners employ food in the service of resistance As his analysis suggests this text emphasizes a need to advance a broader discussion about the diets of prisoners

Dutkiewicz, Gabriel N. Rosenberg, 2026-02-17 Why Wendell Berry Michael Pollan and other slow food loving locavores are wrong about food in America and why Waffle House can save us all This book is sustenance for your mind as it imagines more democratic and delightful ways we can all fill our stomachs Astra Taylor author of Democracy May Not Exist But We ll Miss It When It s Gone The food industry is a major driver of climate change pollution obesity animal suffering and workplace exploitation Many food writers blame the industrial food system and tell individual eaters to fix these problems by buying local artisanal food from small farmers a solution most Americans can t afford But as food policy experts Jan Dutkiewicz and Gabriel Rosenberg remind us modern technology has made food more affordable abundant varied and tastier than at any other time in history In Feed the People they argue that modern food pleasures like Waffle House waffles and the industrial systems that make them possible are actually good With smart technology and commonsense policies we can make them even better Dutkiewicz and Rosenberg have traveled around the United States to find the people changing the way we make and eat food from the innovators behind plant based burgers to the cooks serving free school lunches to the labor organizers unionizing fast food joints They show that building a food system that works for everyone will take more than just eating your vegetables Feed the People invites you to sit at the table and join this delicious movement
