

The Life Story of Lord Buddha

One fine day about twenty-six centuries ago, a son was born to King Suddhodhana and Queen Mahamaya of the country of the Sakyas in northern India. The child was named Siddhartha. Seven days after the birth of Prince Siddhartha, Queen Mahamaya died.

A hermit was called to the palace to predict the prince's future. This sage foretold that Prince Siddhartha would become either a Buddha or else a ruler of the world. The hermit foretold that if the prince saw four certain sights he would renounce the world and become a Buddha. These four sights were declared to be an old man bent with age, a sick man in great pain, a dead man and a wandering beggar. The king desired his son to grow up to be a ruler of the world and decided to keep all knowledge of pain and sorrow from him. The Gautama family, into which Siddhartha was born, was very ambitious for the young prince.

Siddhartha's education began early in life and he was taught all the leading arts of that time. He became a skilful archer, a clever swordsman and a good rider. Soon his knowledge became greater than that of his teachers. His father gave him everything the heart could desire and the young prince did not know there was sorrow anywhere in the world. At an early age he was married to the beautiful Princess Yasodhara. The king built for him three large and beautiful palaces, one for each of the three seasons of India, and he and his wife lived happily in all this luxury.

One day Siddhartha sent for Channa, his charioteer, and they drove to the royal pleasure grounds. On their way they came across an old man bent with his advanced age, just as had been predicted at Siddhartha's birth. At this sight, Siddhartha asked Channa why the man was in such a condition. Channa told him that all men became like that if they lived to great age. This news made the prince very unhappy and he told Channa to drive back to the palace. When the king heard that the first prediction had been fulfilled, he was very disturbed and ordered that all sorrowful sights be kept away from his son.

Soon the prince forgot all about the incident and, once again, Channa drove his master to the royal pleasure gardens. On their way they met with the second of the predictions, a man suffering from great pain. The poor

California Berkeley Since the early days of Buddhism in China monastics and laity alike have expressed a profound concern with the past In voluminous historical works they attempted to determine as precisely as possible the dates of events in the Buddha s life seeking to iron out discrepancies in varying accounts and pinpoint when he delivered which sermons Buddhist writers chronicled the history of the Dharma in China as well compiling biographies of eminent monks and nuns and detailing the rise and decline in the religion s fortunes under various rulers They searched for evidence of karma in the historical record and drew on prophecy to explain the past John Kieschnick provides an innovative expansive account of how Chinese Buddhists have sought to understand their history through a Buddhist lens Exploring a series of themes in mainstream Buddhist historiographical works from the fifth to the twentieth century he looks not so much for what they reveal about the people and events they describe as for what they tell us about their compilers understanding of history Kieschnick examines
