

How to Survive a Shark Encounter

1. If you see a shark, avoid splashing or making wild movements; it tends to only attract their attention.

Do not play dead;
you'll be considered an easy meal.

2. Swim away from the shark calmly and quickly, keeping it in eyesight at all times.

3. If attacked, fight back aggressively by hitting the shark in the eyes, nose, and gills with your fists or on-hand equipment, like snorkels or dive gear.

4. Thrash violently if the shark takes hold of you. Fight like hell, hit anything you can reach, and keep moving until it lets go.

Shark Attacks of the Twentieth Century Ralph S. Collier,2003 This is the single most historically valuable book ever written on the subject of Pacific Coast shark attacks Through bone chilling accounts in victims own words never before published photographs and detailed maps and charts of attack locations this book accurately chronicles every known unprovoked shark attack that occurred along the Pacific Coast of North America during the entire Twentieth Century The author's examination of wound characteristics recurring locations and the curious phenomenon of attacks on inanimate objects afford astonishing insights into why sharks attack. These insights form the foundation for his safety recommendations to specific ocean user groups. Based on 40 years of research, this book will be of inestimable value to scientists, researchers, and educators, as well as anyone that might venture into the waters off the Pacific Coast. The understanding gained from this book will temper fears with knowledge and provide the reader with clear and specific information that may easily make the difference between life and death.

Shark Mark Carwardine, 2004. Sharks in one form or another have inhabited our seas and oceans for more than 400 million years. They were here long before the dinosaurs and they witnessed the rise of our own species. Awe-inspiring, beautiful, mysterious, frightening, sharks have been described in many ways and provoke a mixture of feelings. But they never do less than excite and impress. Story of these wonderful creatures from their early beginnings to their struggle for survival today. He describes their origins and ancestors, introduces the diversity of sharks, marvels at their perfectly designed bodies, explains how they reproduce, investigates their reputation as the ultimate killing machines, and finds out how these little-known animals are being studied. He even reveals how and where to jump into the sea for a real-life close encounter with a wild shark. Of course, the fearsome reputation of sharks travels before them. But how much truth is there in the fishermen's tales that have circulated for centuries? Mark puts our irrational fears into perspective by presenting the facts and exploding the fallacies. Far from being killing machines with a taste for human flesh, most sharks are quite nervous of people. There would be many more attacks if they really were out to get us. We pose a far greater threat to sharks than they do to us. According to the most widely accepted scientific estimate, over 100 million sharks are killed by people every year.
