

THE BOOK

John Ray, Secretary of the Texas Association and president, Texas State Historical Survey Committee and Pioneer Historical Survey Committee.

"This autobiographical sketch is presented in a pleasant narrative form, with suitable the reader to follow the younger Carl Hahn's interesting and sometimes surprising experiences, the variety of which will surprise the reader. and while at times one may feel that he is being deceived to more about such things as mining, ranching, prospecting and hunting than he needs to know. . . it is delightful reading and one may expect to be fascinated by Mr. Hahn's amusing manner and almost total recall."

He Brown, Chief of the Austin Bureau for the Houston Chronicle, has published Austin, Texas 1911 has this to say about "Confessions of a Proliferator."

"I'm delighted that this book is being published because it will be a worthwhile addition to a Texas or American collection."

C. L. Brewster, Ph.D., Dean of the Graduate Division of the University of Texas at El Paso.

"Will Rogers used to say that all he knew was what he read in the papers. Carl Hahn knows a good deal more than that. He knows what he saw and experienced in 'what was left of the Old West' around the turn of the century, and he produces from a copious memory a remarkably detailed and convincing picture of that long vanished but always fascinating segment of the American experience."

Dale Walter, Managing Editor, San Angelo Standard-Times says:

"Likely every man who has labored around the country and worked at an endless number of jobs has an interesting story to tell."

"Unfortunately, most haven't the facility for writing about their experiences such as Carl Hahn has."

"Because he has the ability to pass on his experiences to the reader and because he was unique among others -- his roaming and frequent job changes all aimed at a goal to become a writer -- his story should have an exalted place in lists of the Southwest."

"His ambition was to make his own way without the help of his well-to-do family and to make enough money to get the necessary education to become a writer -- specifically writer of the history of the Big Bend and the Davis Mountains country. Sound simple? Maybe, but the days of his young adulthood were hard times, and goals weren't easily attained."

"His solution led him 'hitchhiking' around the country, riding the rails to towns where he could work as a piano player, tailcoater, miner, section harvester, ranch hand, prospector, gambler's shill or at one of dozens of other jobs."

"Most of these experiences were in the first decade

Supplement Bancroft Library, After The Boom In Tombstone And Jerome, Arizona Eric L. Clements, 2014-10-01 Focusing on two Arizona towns that had their origins in mining bonanzas Tombstone and Jerome historian Eric L. Clements offers a rare study dissecting the process of bust itself the reasons and manners in which these towns declined as the mining booms ended Tombstone was the site of one of the great silver bonanzas of the nineteenth century a boom that started in the late 1870s and was over by 1890 Jerome's copper deposits were mined for much longer beginning in the 1880s and enduring until the 1930s But when the mining booms ended each town faced its decline in similar ways The process of decline was more complex than superficial histories have indicated and Clements discusses the role of labor unions in trying to stave off collapse the changing demography of decline the nature and expression of social tensions the impact on institutions such as churches and schools and the human responses to continued economic depression But bust involved more than a steady decline into ghost town status Clements discovers the towns remaining residents employed numerous strategies to survive and reduce household expenses In the end both towns reinvented themselves as late twentieth century tourist attractions Books and Pamphlets, Including Serials and Contributions to Periodicals Library of Congress.
