The Tragedy of the Self Gary F. Greif,2000-03-29 In The Tragedy of the Self Gary F Greif attributes social violence and individual isolation to a contemporary neglect of a fundamental human need for support that only human culture and interaction can promote and reinforce Greif bases this interpretation on the works of Heinz Kohut a psychoanalyst who by degrees transformed Freud s theory of the instincts into a theory of the self Kohut maintains that every individual fundamentally requires continual human support in order to live with confidence and hope Greif introduces Kohut s understanding of the nature development and disintegration of the self analyzes modern and contemporary assumptions regarding the individualistic anti social nature of humans and concludes that contemporary societal assumptions regarding the acceptance of individualism reflect and perpetuate a tragic human condition Greif argues that the inability of the self to experience a human fulfilling life is a tragedy intensified by a century of economic and cultural forces promoting social antagonism A unique and stimulating book The Tragedy of the Self will appeal to professionals in psychoanalytic psychology self psychology and philosophy as well as academics and students in the Humanities and Social Sciences The Search for Serenity: Understanding and Overcoming Anxiety Daniel A.
