Confronting the Past to Build the Future

Caroline Andrew, Stacy Warren, Urban Affairs Association, 2002 Imagining Future War Antulio J. Echevarria II, 2007-04-30 Rapid and momentous technological changes at the turn of the 20th century forced military professionals and educated civilians to envision the future of war and warfare especially during an age where nations found themselves aggressively competing for dominance on the world stage Antulio J Echevarria II offers a comparative study of these predictions to assess who got it right and why He concludes that professionals were particularly adept at predicting the warfare of the immediate future by framing their discussions in terms of solving tactical problems but they were much less successful at thinking of the long term Unburdened by the necessity of strategic problem solving educated amateurs were allowed more flexibility to imagine the long term future of warfare and at times proved to be remarkably accurate Echevarria organizes his study by comparing visions of future wars on land at sea undersea and in air In each instance professionals and amateurs had their own distinctive imaginings Among the notable speculators included in this book are science fiction author H G Wells and military theorist Ivan Bloch This approach to the study of warfare is one of those rare examples of a book that can appeal to and inform a wide cross section of readers
