

5 | Developing Reading and Writing Skills

To consider before reading this chapter:

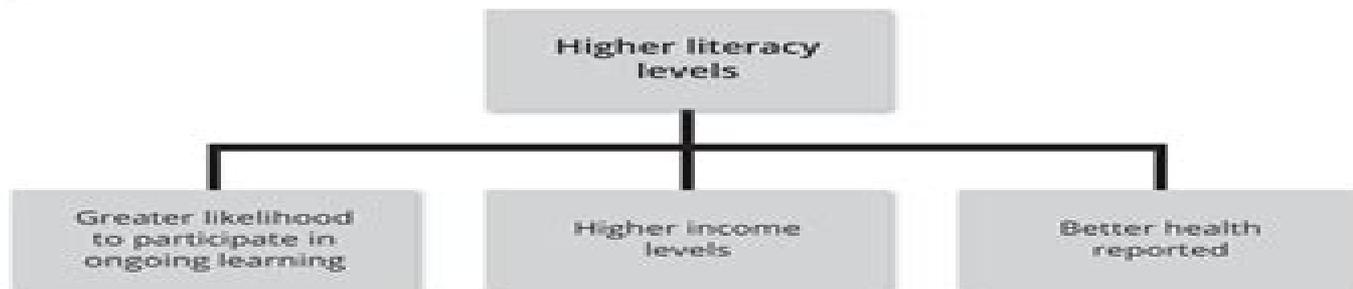

- How are reading and writing situated in our daily lives?
- What strategies do readers employ with different types of texts? How do you approach writing for different purposes?
- How can we address the literacy needs of learners with limited prior formal schooling and limited literacy skills in their first language and in English?

Part I: Situated reading and writing skills development

5.1 Introduction

Consider how much written material (print and digital) comes your way every day: bills, junk mail, school materials, or work instructions. Print is everywhere in signage, advertisements, phones, ATM machines, and packaging. As a reader, you scan through some things quickly, while taking the time to digest others more carefully. As a writer, you employ different practices as well, depending on your purpose for writing and your audience. In this chapter, we turn to the issue of literacy development. We explore how literacy is situated in our lives. We look at varying purposes for reading and writing, the needs of learners with little or no literacy in their first language, and common approaches to teaching reading and writing to adult learners.

Literacy levels are closely linked to the ability to attain gainful employment, to participation in ongoing learning, and to improved health outcomes (Batalova and Fix 2015). In a print-dense society, literacy enables adults to gain access to information and opportunities in their communities. Research also suggests that the ability to read and understand complex texts is linked to success in college and careers (Pimentel 2013). Whether you are working with learners with print literacy in their first language or a learner who is learning to read for the first time, literacy development matters!

(Batalova and Fix 2015)

How do we define literacy? As we see in this chapter, literacy entails far more than a set of discrete skills and strategies to develop and hone. Literacy is socially constructed and dimensions
