

Developing Characters

01

Make a list of iconic or memorable characters from literature, cinema, TV or games.

Carry out a detailed character analysis on one or more of these characters to help your understanding of their traits, emotions and behaviours.

02

Using your character analysis, develop a set of questions or use a checklist to ask of your own characters.

Do they have enough emotional depth? Do you really know enough about them? Apply the same analysis to your own heroes and villains.

03

Establish their tone of voice. You need to know how your characters speak as well as how they think.

Make a spreadsheet and practice writing lines of dialogue for your characters. Put them in different scenarios and write down what they'd say.

04

Develop your knowledge of psychology.

Understanding psychological traits is a great way to root your characters in reality. Explore the 16 different personality types to learn as much as you can about human psychology, then apply it to your characters.
