Kiraly, Karin Maksymski, Silvia Hansen-Schirra, 2013 Alberta Journal of Educational Research, 1981 Handbook of Juvenile Delinquency Herbert C. Quay, 1987-05-12 Abstract This handbook provides a critical review of literature and the latest research and theory on juvenile delinquency The authors examine psychological aspects of the juvenile delinquent condition including epidemiology psychological correlates family contributions to delinquency patterns of delinquent behavior prediction prevention treatment and research issues This work is a valuable contribution to the literature on juvenile delinquency offering an improved scientific understanding for psychologists sociologists correctional and criminal professionals and others who work with these young people Values Education and Technology Peter Christopher Emberley, 1995 For decades values education has been one of the most hotly contested areas of reappraisal in school curricula This book contributes to the debate with the controversial proposition that the current modes of values education are not cultivating the qualities associated with moral judgment and character that they are in fact producing a consciousness which merely reinforces some of the potentially destructive tendencies of modern technology Emberley sets the stage for his argument with an examination of the progressive initiatives in education since the 1960s He discusses the expectations which arose with the proposals to teach values as an explicit component of the curriculum and reveals a hidden agenda which undermines their explicit objectives He goes on to explore the relation between values education and technology building on the thought of Hannah Arendt and Eric Voegelin Technology according to Emberley is becoming the entire context for our understanding of reason politics and the intellectual or spiritual life The question is raised whether technology has become the ontology of our age as George Grant suggested and whether it has eclipsed essential relations and experiences which have traditionally defined our humanity Emberley depicts technological development as proceeding through three historical phases which he characterizes as a mechanical order an organic order and an electric field By the third phase he proposes traditional humanism has nearly disappeared Emberley offers a systematic analysis of three of the dominant models of values education and suggests that they bolster this deconstruction of humanism by playing out the philosophic relation between Kant Hegel and Nietzsche His analysis also indicates how these models replicate the structure of each of the technological phases The consequence of this collusion between values education and technological consciousness is a person who cannot be critical of technology one who cannot recognize any limits to our technological prowess Whether this collusion is intentional or inadvertent is one of the many issues Emberley pursues He proposes pedagogical options which revive the spirit though not the letter of the traditional curriculum He argues that the aim of education is to produce a character that does not allow reason to become merely a faculty of shrewd calculation and technical expertise

Section I, Background Theories and Research, deals with the history, theories, and investigations in philosophy, theology, psychology, and sociology concerned with morality and ethics. Theories and research on moral development, individual differences, and procedures for controlling and intervening in immoral behavior are given particular attention in Chapters 2 and 4. The seven chapters in Section II, Applied Ethics, are application oriented, focusing on ethical issues, principles, and practices in various applied contexts. A set of Questions and Activities are included at the end of every chapter. URLs for websites containing further information are provided in the appendices. A comprehensive glossary, bibliography, and subject and author indexes complete the book. Practical Approaches to Ethics for Colleges and Universities Stephanie L. Moore, 2008-09-16

Ethics can seem like a slippery topic to tackle for any institution. Yet ethics pervade every layer of higher education, from strategic planning to codes of ethics to curricular integration of ethics to actual courses and professional standards of practice for faculty staff and students to include as future professionals. In this issue, we take on ethics in higher education from a practical perspective. Topics include social responsibility as the foundation for strategic planning, sustainability on campus, and related service learning; ethics across the curriculum, general and specific institutional codes of ethics, professional codes of ethics, and implications for student-teacher relationships; design and delivery of a course on ethics; institutions' ethical obligations to provide a quality education to athletes. Whether you are senior administration, a dean or department chair, an individual faculty member, or student, this issue provides practical advice for addressing ethics. This is the 142nd issue of the Jossey-Bass quarterly report series, New Directions for Higher Education, addressed to presidents, vice presidents, deans, and other higher education decision makers on all kinds of campuses. New Directions for Higher Education provides timely information and authoritative advice about major issues and administrative problems confronting every institution.
